For these reasons the fruit buds have been unexpectedly preserved. In the Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia peach regions prospects are good. The rainfall of last Autumn along the scaboard has been resumed this Spring, and the delay of farming operations has been so great that very little plowing has been done. Only those farmers who had teams and implements in complete readiness were able to sow oats during April, while they hoped to do this in March. This leaves a large amount of work to be done within a brief period.
